County Agricultural Association Notes.

The corn crop is considerably better all over the county than it gave indications of being a couple weeks ago. Silo filling is well at hand and in some sections the silos are filled.

The agent's attention has been called to a couple of instances where several cows in the herds have been affected with garget due to the feeding of hot ensilage or green rowen that is heating. The ensilage or rowen should be thoroughly cooled before feeding. The cow is affected first by a swelling of one or more quarters of the udder and the milk is thick in that particular part. It seriously affects the production of the cow and if not treated at once may cause the animal to lose the quarter permanently. When a case of this kind appears, the affected parts should be rubbed with turpentine and lard. Melt the lard and put in enough turpentine to keep it from solidifying. Give the animal a couple doses of saltpetre or a tablespoon of fluid extract of poke root twice a day for two days. It is advisable to wash the hands after milking each cow so affected to avoid any possible chance of contaminating other cows.

Considerable time this week is to be given by the county agent in Brown-ington in the interests of the cow testing association. He will spend some time with State Forester Hawes in several other towns.

Prouty Accepts Nomination.

A telegram from Mr. Prouty at Washington, D. C., to H. Nelson Jackson reads: Word of nomination just received. Let me thank you and through you the Progressive party. Regret that I could not be there to accept in person. Signed, C. A. Prouty.

Dale, Republican nominee for congress in this district will be present at the Republican county convention to be held at Newport Wednesday, September 30, and address the convention. The place is Lane's opera house and the time two o'clock p. m. Local Infantile Paralysis Situation.

Just as it was thought the local epidemic of infantile paralysis had entirely subsided, no cases having been reported for nearly two weeks, two new cases developed, a Gilpin child with slight affection of the left upper arm and a Baldwin child with slight affection of the legs. Neither case is dangerous or severe. The Monitor is printing this week an article telling the views of an authority on this disease and also a word about the epidemic in the state. Since that summary was printed three cases have broken out in Enosburg, and as is generally known, there are a few cases in Brownington.

The Schools and Barton's Quarantine.

Last week the Monitor announced that the schools would open Sept. 29, laboring under the supposition that the following order from the state board of health held. This order is in the form of a telegram and is dated Aug. 29 and is addressed to Health Officer Prime. It reads: "State board of health order Barton schools not open for one month." It had become quite generally talked and understood that the order was for a month and that things would be opened up after the month was up.

However, Health Officer Prime received under date of Sept. 2, the following order which is in effect:

"Under authority given by Sec. 5436 of the public statutes you are hereby ordered to close the churches and schools and prevent the assembling of people in any place in the village of Barton, until further notice.

"By order of the state board of health.

"Chas. F. Dalton, Secretary."

It will be seen from this order that schools and public gatherings are not permitted until this order is lifted by the state board of health and until "further notice" the school will not open.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Flexner, the Edison of Medicine Finds It Is Transmitted like a Common Cold.

Substantial disproof of the idea that the infection of infantile paralysis is transferred by biting insects and a strong implication that it spreads much as "common colds" spread is furnished by publication of the results of Dr. Simon Flexner's latest experiments at the Rockefeller Institute. Dr. Flexner does not express these conclusions but the record pretty nearly compels them. Some three years ago Dr. Rosenau of the Harvard medical school succeeded in infecting wild monkeys by the agency of stable flies which had bitten monkeys suffering from the disease, and his results were later confirmed by Dr. Anderson of the United States public health service. One of the grave implications of the disease in the manner of its spread from the sick to the well—seemed thus on a way promising to a solution, when other experimenters working along Dr. Rosenau's lines, failed to secure transfer of the infection by biting flies, and the theory which Dr. Rosenau's results seemed to have since then remained hidden in doubt.

That the infection starts in the well person in the membranes of the nasal passages was Dr. Flexner's hypothesis, before the Rosenau experiments were undertaken. The experiments now undertaken greatly strengthen Dr. Flexner's hypothesis, and reduce the probability of infection by insect bites to the status of an extremely infrequent accident. The experiments bearing on this point have to do with the disposition of the virus of the disease when it is introduced directly into the blood. The biting insect bites in order to suck out the blood of the animal for food and such infection as he brings to the animal enters inevitably and almost exclusively the blood stream of the animal, since the insect probably does not perform the sucking movement which also expels the infectious matter from its proboscis until this feeding tube has reached the blood.

We copy from a Rhode Island newspaper an account of the marriage of Miss Ethel Twombly, daughter of the late John Twombly of this place:

"Not a few may have stopped and wondered what was taking place at the First Baptist church on Wednesday afternoon, as the large touring car of the Connecticut House, stopped to allow a happy party to alight, who immediately disappeared as the doors of that edifice swung open to admit them. It proved to be exclusively a family party from Springfield, Mass., who had come thither to witness the marriage of Gilbert Hugh Reid of East Longmeadow, Mass., and Miss Ethel Louise Twombly, of 20 Lenox street, Springfield, Mass. The little party entered the church where they were met by the pastor, Dr. H. A. Roberts, and here, surrounded by their own immediate friends, the twin were made one. The beautiful little church never looked more attractive, than when, with the sun shining through the delicately tinted windows, the solemn pledges were taken and the words spoken that united these two lives in one. After congratulations had been offered, the party again entered the altar where they were deluged with confetti. As they seemed very happy, and very busy too, in brushing away some of those mute evidences of their friends' regard."

AUTOMOBILES IN BARTON

It should be of interest to know that there are a few over 100 automobiles in town. It is hardly a dozen years since every automobile in the town of Barton could have been counted on the fingers on one hand, while today we have a car to every thirty inhabitants or one to every seventh family in town. Below we give a complete list of automobiles in Barton.

It is of interest to note, too, how evenly divided is the number between Orleans and Barton. This list is taken from a recent book issued by the state and has cars listed to Aug. 20.
